KODU LÄVEL – HOMEBOUND

PART ONE

ur story begins in 1920, when Guide was only a young girl, who spent her time jumping on silo bales and playing hide-and-seek in high grass. She didn't have many friends, yet every day was exciting and full of joy for exploring. No day was ever long enough to fit all the fun and that's why Guide loved mornings – she could continue adventures still left undone from the previous day!

Days, weeks and months passed and turned into years in her memories. Games got shorter, the nights longer. Then came the day when Guide stood on the threshold of her home and said goodbye with a heavy heart. Her scarf flapping about in the cold autumn wind, cheeks red from her tears and the pinch of cold, she raised her hand to wave her goodbye one last time. One day we will meet again!

Guide spent years travelling unfamiliar lands, she met people, who hadn't even heard of her home. Estonia? Where's that? It was a question she got from everyone willing to listen to her speak about the way the morning sun shone, about the colourful leaves and the freezing cold of her home place. No, they hadn't heard of Estonia or the tiny place Guide called her home. Some of them hadn't even heard of snow!

Journeys ended and began again, people she'd become to know were replaced by new faces, just so the circle would come to an end and she could start from the beginning once again. And although she'd learned and experienced so much, met such incredible people, Guide still missed her home. She missed the sound of the wind and the way the gate would squeak every time her father came home. She missed the inviting scent of pancakes her mother had made and she definitely yearned for that heat of the sauna her heart was missing...
